

Qualified helping hand....

If you are looking for qualified, motivated, well-educated students to take part in hands-on training with your operation, WISE can introduce you to candidates from numerous countries around the globe.

WISE seeks to expose agricultural students to the use of technology to enable producers throughout the world to benefit from sound environmental practices and production methods. Our goal is to establish long-term relationships with our growers and hosts so that future students will have these opportunities year after year.

the difference

Ag Training and Internship participants are placed with training sites and growers across the U.S. by WISE program staff. Because the program is largely learning by doing, Agricultural Trainees and Interns expect to work along side the host and other production employees. The participants are considered "farmers in
